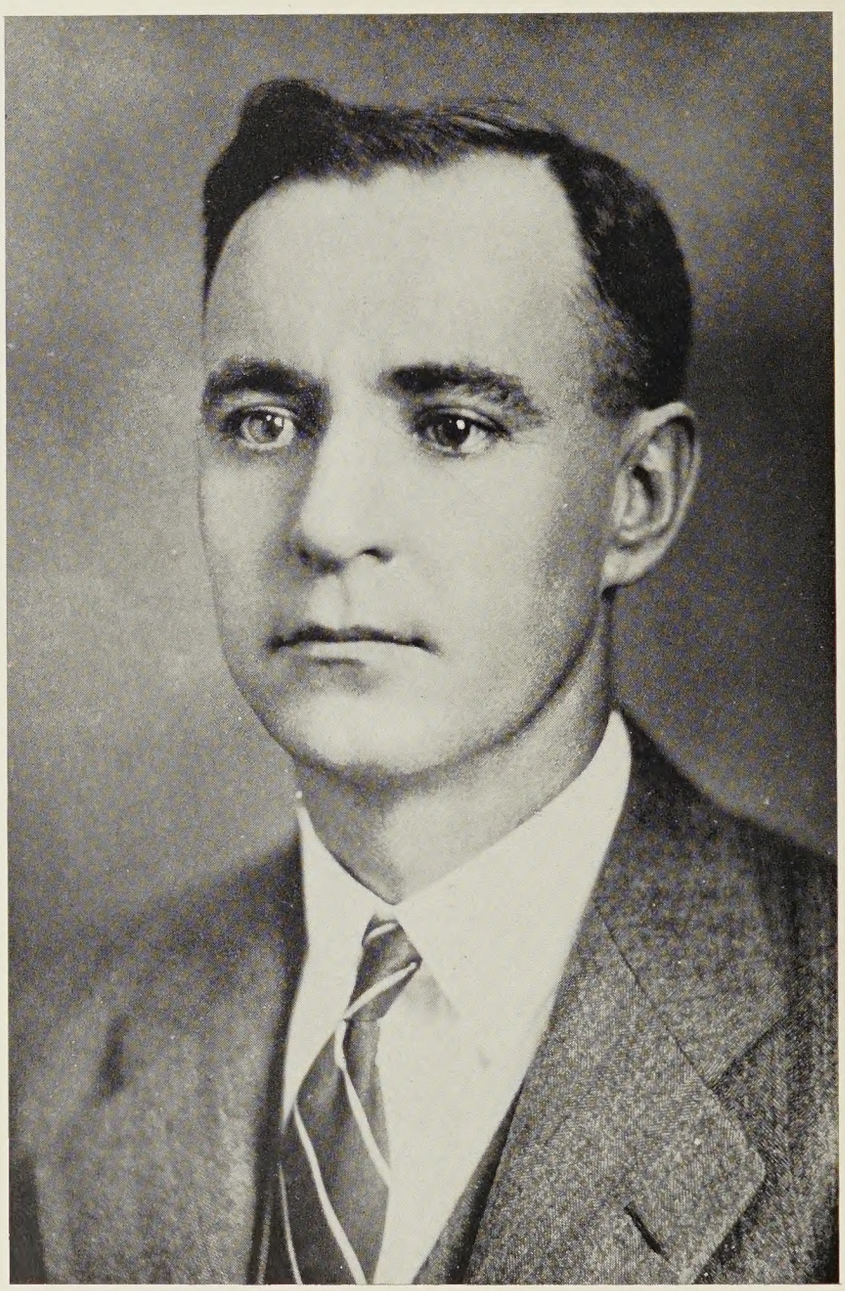
FOREWORD

If, in the years to come, this volume of "Cat Tales," serves to unite once more these separated classmates of 1930 in the common bond of fond recollections, the authors will have achieved success.



Dr. W. O. Hampton, Principal

DEDICATION

To

Our Principal

WILLIAM OSCAR HAMPTON

whose sympathy has been ours through the years, and whose high ideals have been an inspiration, we, the Senior Class of 1930, dedicate, in gratitude, this, our volume of "Cat Tales."

Class of '30

Before us lie our college days
And then a bigger game;
Before us lies a greater life,
Before us honor—fame.

We stand now on the threshold
Of a way that's new and strange.
A way that is not always smooth,
But many a mountain range.

But though our way be difficult
Two things will help us through;
The class of '30 has an aim,
And has a spirit true.

That spirit fills our hearts with pride,
Our courage waits anew;
We see our Alma Mater gleam,
And see our dreams come true.

But classmates, and dear school, before
We leave we wish to say,
The same old spirit that bound us close
And helped us many a day,
Will stay forever in our hearts,
And help us on our way.

—Emma Gade Hutaff.

Class Prophecy

On a snowy day in July, in the year 1930, Pilot James Head of the Lynch Aircraft Corporation took off in the midst of the cheering multitude, in his mystery ship, "Heinz 57," for the planet Mars. In a confidential statement to reporter Billy Merritt of the Williams Bros. Newspaper, "The Evening Squawk," Louis Oliver, Technical Advisor to the Lynch Aircraft Corporation states that it is expected that Pilot Head will return within 25 to 30 years.

Little is known of the trip, but, needless to say, Pilot Head returned to earth on schedule time.

He was met at the field by a welcoming committee headed by Mayor Sam Troy, and composed of John Ausley, Ed. Humphrey, and Margaret Woodbury. In recognition of his wonderful accomplishments the Navy Department, ably represented by Admiral Michael C. Brown, presented Pilot Head with a medal as he stepped from his plane.

He was conducted to an official car to the tune of the cheery march, "The Whitlock Dirge," ably played by the Blunderbuss Boys, under the direction of Frank Peiffer. As he stepped into the car, he noticed that it was a "Wm. Boyd Straight 18," manufactured by the Isabel James Motor Company. The chauffeur was Earl Wenberg, champion taxi-driver for the William Liles Transportation Company.

He was taken to the Schulken-Pickard Hotel. Head bell-boy, Sam Hill, took his luggage to room 310A. As Pilot Head registered, he noticed that behind the desk, Clerks Elmer Snipes and Bill Taylor were deeply engaged in a fast game of tiddley-winks.

He slept until noon the next day. As the waiter brought his meal, he noticed a little sign on the tray stating that the vegeables had been especially grown on John Trask's Farm. This gave James no end of pleasure as he had been an intimate friend of John's in days gone by. After dinner he was entertained by a special indoor performance of the widely known Blake Boys' Circus. The chief attractions of the show were: Walton Burkhimer, the pin-headed man; Abbie Stanley, the snake-charmer; Newett Edwards, the world's smallest man; John Keith and Henry Emerson, world famous magicians; and the Smith Russian Dancing Team, led by Octavia and Glenwood and composed of Eleanor, Mildred, Muriel and Preston. Included in the circus was a short concert by a quartet composed of Richard MacKenzie, Geo. Newcomb, Ed. Schulken and Tom Burch. Over the great noise made by these singers could be heard the piping wail of Irving Kaminsky advertising Bonitz's Best Popcorn. Needless to say, our hero purchased a bag.

Early next morning he commenced a tour of the city which he soon found had been greatly beautified and improved by the active Commissioner of Public Works, J. U. King. Greenfield Park, started in 1917, had been so improved since James last saw it that he hardly knew the place. On entering the park he spied Emma Gade Hutaff and Mary Borden Wallace in the midst of a strenuous game of jack-rocks. At the fish pond he spoke to Jack Hammer, a notorious crook, who was busily engaged in dropping pebbles on the goldfishes' heads. At the swimming beach, Bernard Solomon, the life-guard, was having a hard job keeping watch over Eliz. Lewis, Katherine Loughlin and Annie McCulloch, who were trying to master the Helen Dobson stroke under the direction of Charles Gorman, swimming instructor. Katherine Hoover, keeper of the zoo, was sitting on a log conversing with Jean Hall, who was fishing for minnows to place in her fish bowl.

As James continued on his sight-seeing tour, he chanced to come upon the L. and M. Townsend Building, where a beauty contest was being held. Among the contestants for the men's prize were: Gene Farriss, Bradley Wootten, R. M. Padrick, Joe Salling, Tom Lawther and Goof Gaylor. Among those trying for the girl's prize were: Florence Foard, Louise Wood, Flora Graham and Mary Giles Cowan. At this time he alighted from his car and continued his journey through the business district on foot. As he passed Mincey's Eating House, he saw little Randy Matthews with his nose pressed against the glass staring at Frank Jewell, who was dexterously flipping flap-jacks inside.

As he continued his journey, he noticed Captains Mildred and Mary C. Rivenbark, of the Salvation Army, emphatically endeavoring to enlighten the spirits of a group gathered around them. Italyne Baggett, Horton Pridgeon, Wilhelmina Livingston, Grayson Brothers, Robert Eakins and Almeda Stewart were in this group of down and outers.

Feeling very tired, Pilot Head returned to his hotel and was surprised to find there Messrs. James King and Guilford Oldham, leading brokers of the New York Stock Exchange, with whom he spent a few minutes in discussing the destiny of the world.

Upon entering his room he threw himself into a spacious Morriss chair, the sole product of the Mary C. Morriss Chair Company, and started reading the "Evening Squawk." While reading the paper, he chanced upon the entertainment advertisements where he noticed that, at the Corbett Theatre, Walter Noe and Frances Lynch were co-starring in Harry Sell's popular stage play, "Two Babes in the Woods."

After reading the paper he turned on his radio-television set manufactured by the Linwood King Radio Corporation of New Hanover County. Suddenly he heard the excited voice of Lionel Stevenson broadcasting from station TR2 announcing the world's Heavy-Weight Boxing Championship Match, between Big Boy F. Greene, the title holder, and K. O. (Charles) Cox, his opponent. C. W. finally gained Referee Bob Bigg's decision by a foul, as the aggressive Fred knocked his opponent's glasses to the floor in the last second of the last minute of the last round.

He gave the dials a vigorous twist and heard the voice of Ralph Williams announcing; "Well, folks, it's all over now. The new World's Champion Typist, Erwin Jaffe, has just been crowned, having defeated Viola Waldorf. Jaffe used a new D. Nelson Typewriter, while Viola wrote on an F. Mallard machine." Pilot Head switched to another station, and looking into the instrument, he saw Helene Walton displaying the new Fay Turner Dresses. Among the mannequins displaying these were: Marion Small, Francis Stoddard, Nantce Weaver and Fay Schulken.

At the request of Commander Head, bell-boys, Bill Rankin and Lloyd Moore, brought up a quart of Beasley Ice Cream and a package of Grady-Futch's Chocolate Wafers. He enjoyed these very much but they brought on a violent sickness. It was an attack of a rare sickness, called the Batts Blues, of the Annie variety. He was rushed to the eleventh floor by elevator boy, Mick Loughlin, where he caught the Carter-Chesson Elevated and was whisked away to the Private Sanitorium of Doctors Hannah Boylan and Ed. Peschau. He was placed under the immediate care of physicians Burnell Curtis and Ed Ellis. After a treatment by these, he was placed under the strict care of the Davis nurses, Ruth, Magdlyn, Flossie and Betty.

When well enough to sit up, he noticed that Aleen Hunt and Francis Flowers were inmates of the institution. Both were afflicted with minor cases of the Croom Fever. They were being dosed with Sara Head's Vegetable Compound, which was administered by Nurse Mildred Joyner.

Days passed and Mr. Head rapidly regained his health. One day he chanced to pick up a newspaper, "The Huntington Journal," edited by Jack Atkinson, and was astounded to see that a great mine catastrophe had occurred in Orrletown, Maryland, and that 13 miners, employed by the Barber Mines Corporation, has been entombed. In the list of the imprisoned, he recognized the names of Jim Loughlin, Jake Freedland, Leroy Tienken and some Bolshevik women miners, Margaret Rankin, Ada Abel, Francis Merritt, Edna Mae Newton and Gladys Otten. He was pleased to note that Herbert Baucom and Irma Bonander were heading the relief committee, composed of Dorothy Breece, Mary Vick, Lillie Costello and Mary C. Schulken.

Later on that evening Interne Robert McGlaughon came to see how his patients, Jean McCaig and Margaret Wessell were getting along. Both were suffering from drinking some of Ethel Williams' Home Brew. On his way out he stopped to enquire as to the condition of Commander Head. While preparing a sleeping-potion for Pilot Head, Dr. McGlaughon told him that a delegation from the Sara Bradshaw Home for Spinsters, consisting of Dot Farmer, Julia Siegler, Eleanor Solomon, Ruth Parker and Hattie Johnson, were coming to visit him that night.

After Pilot Head heard this news, the potion began to take effect and he sunk off into fond recollections of the Dear Old Class of '30.

Class History

'Twas early in September, '25 was the year,
When all the children from far and near,
Came to school, anew our lessons to start,
And gathered together, in groups all apart.
These small children, as you probably know,
Were eighth graders, as green as grass doth grow.
At the bell's sound into the building we went,
And soon each, our feelings did vent.
When the desired class, we could not find,
We soon found ourselves, lagging behind.
Christmas arrived, and as an icy blast of fear,
The thought came—"Exams, exams are near."
We studied hard, as all eighth graders should,
And each passed—as well as he could!
The second exam was not quite the same,
We considered the work only a game.
So our first year went by at a rapid pace,
And Freshmen soon took the eighth graders' place.

Our second year, '26-'27, was indeed quite changed,
The opening day, our work was arranged.
We went through our tasks, and had no fear,
Although we knew our exams were near.
We strutted the halls, with thoughts so fine,
"We'll soon be Sophomores, just a little time."
Thus our second year went, and soon was done,
It seemed, to us, before it had begun.

As Sophomores, upperclassmen thoughts began to assail us,
And it was increasingly difficult for teachers to fail us.
Because—Graduation—our goal, we could dimly see,
And we clung to that ideal, as a leaf to a tree.

We lorded it over the Freshmen so low,
Though we were as they only two years ago.
The Junior Play, and Banquet so rare,
Were great treats to all who were there.
Our fourth year, as Juniors, ended with elation,
The next as Seniors, we'd be lords of creation.

'Twas with joyful feelings, and not with frowns,
When graduation night, we wore our caps and gowns,
Garments royal, which added a lure,
To those diplomas, which we did secure.
And where'er we go, though far away,
On any gloomy, or sunny day,
Our thoughts return to our school so dear,
And to happy memories of '30, our Senior year.

—Erwin Jaffe.

Last Will and Testament

On this, the thirtieth day of May, nineteen hundred and thirty, we, the Senior Class of New Hanover High School, in the City of Wilmington and the State of North Carolina, do solemnly testify to the following articles which we sincerely and sadly bequeath to those whom we so regretfully leave behind us:

We, the Senior Class, do will and bequeath to our successors, the present Junior Class, our reputation for being the most brilliant graduating class in the history of the school.

I, Katherine Bonitz, leave my fuzzy white head gear to Dorothy Holman.

I, Harry Hufham, leave to Claude Howell my athletic skill.

We, Elizabeth Farmer and John Ausley, leave our "permanents" to Hazel Hobbs.

I, Mary Borden Wallace, leave to Charles Bogan my ability to translate Latin.

I, Guilford Oldham, leave to Oscar Hamilton my sweet talk.

I, Elizabeth Grady, leave my wagging tongue to Gerda Quelch.

I, Ruth Davis, will my "line" to those girls in the Junior Class who never get a man.

I, James Head, leave my alertness of mind to Katherine Cantwell.

I, Margaret Wessell, leave to Rachel Carroll my quiet and bashful ways.

I, Randolf Matthews, leave my ability to manage to Phillip Hammer.

I, Isabel James, leave my personified laziness to Mary Lamb.

I, Almeda Stewart, leave my flirtatious ways to Leila Stack.

I, Hannah Boylan, bequeath my intellectual powers to Marguerite Page.

I, Jessiebeth Whitlock, leave to Mildred Beale my Southern brogue.

We, Florence Foard and Eugene Farris, will our divine beauty of face and form to Doris Council and Allen Smythe.

I, Frances Lynch, leave my taking ways with the teachers to anybody who hasn't the right attitude.

I, Agnes Kelley, bequeath my well known freckles to Fred Smith.

I, Jean Hall, leave my attractiveness to Rosalie Watters.

I, Fred Greene, leave my broad and tawny shoulders to the entire football team of next year.

I, Walter Noe, leave my ability to sing to anybody who will endorse "Luckies."

I, Jack Hammer, leave my unusual executive ability to next year's Senior President.

I, Margaret Woodbury, leave my heart and hand to Billy Wells.

I, Louise Wood, leave my sentimentality to Mary Taylor.

We, the Senior Class, leave to our school our promise to spread her fame wherever we go and ever carry her memory imprinted upon our hearts.

Football

Displaying a clean fighting spirit, yet defeated in important championship encounters, the Orange and Black football team ended a successful season. Doped to repeat their victory in the state classic, as the great teams of 1927 and 1928 had done, early season optimism was high. Nevertheless, an untimely defeat by Raleigh, and a vain effort to overcome Goldsboro, resulted in the elimination of the locals for premier honors.

The aggregation won six games and were trounced in three, attaining almost three times as many points as their opponents, though not reaching the heights of the 1928 outfit who compiled nine points to each opponent's one.

The backfield, composed of Hufham, veteran fullback; Lynch, substitute quarter of the 1928 team, and the Robinson brothers, Earl and Relman, newcomers to the varsity ranks, displayed a surprising speed and punch, and were a terror to opposing linemen who tried to check their efforts. The Robinson brothers especially showed adeptness at gaining yardage, while the dependable Hufham displayed a powerful driving force. Lynch handled the team well during the season, and Bellamy, substitute halfback, played a nice game, also.

In the line, John Hoggard and Leamon Hanchey regularly took care of the flank positions in great style, the former being a superior pass receiver and the latter a great tackler. Curtis Mathews also played a good game at end. Captain Snipes, veteran tackler, and Captain elect Hanson, took care of the tackle positions. These two had the reputation of being two of the best tackles in the state, while Tienken was outstanding among the reserves. Earl Wenberg and Sinclair Beasley, guards, were of great value to the team; both displaying work of high calibre throughout the season. Center was filled by Hank Jewell, who proved a severe obstacle in the face of the enemy. Ben Adams, substitute center, performed creditably in several of the season's most important encounters.

The squad and student body will never forget the great work of Coach Robert L. (Fighting Bob) Black. His tireless efforts, willing advice and determined ability were the greatest factors in determining the team's success. His assistants, Zack Williams and J. E. Morriss, were capable in all respects and indispensable to Coach Black in developing his grid machine.

Randolph Matthews filled the position as manager in fine style, and his work and zeal aided the efforts of the team immensely.

Likewise, the Scrubs should come in for their share of credit and the greatly improved support of the student body, towards the latter part of the season, had a great moral effect on the team.

Basketball

Acknowledged as dangerous opposition, yet unable to advance as a championship threat, the 1930 basketball outfit from New Hanover High School completed a more or less successful season. Although predicted to repeat in the garnering of the premier state honors, the local basketeers fell before the onslaught of better teams in the title race.

With the return of Captain Bill Rankin, the only regular of the '29 basketball champs, and Tienken and Lawther, lettermen of the same squad, prospects at the primary stages of the campaign were enlightening. However, internal disorder and competition between players for personal honors hindered the progress in important frays. The early defeat in the hands of Raleigh dwindled the hopes of local admirers, and the following week, a victory over the 'Cats by Durham complete the fade-out of the former, as serious contenders for the crown. Subsequently, the Bulls from Durham were victorious over the Charlotte passers in the state title game in Chapel Hill.

Almost naturally, Captain Bill Rankin, a veteran of two seasons, was the outstanding star of the combination. Very rarely did the score book indicate else besides facts of Skipper Bill's high scoring ability. An excellent center, and possessing a dead-eye for the basket, the flashy leader played a stellar brand of basketball, and it was around him that the local play was centered.

Leroy Tienken capably took care of one guard position. His close guarding and accurate passing bolstered the offensive and defensive work considerably. Not only did Roy prove a serious obstacle to opposition who desired to score, but he himself contributed not a few goals toward his team's success. Opposite him, Billy Merritt, the ever-dependable floor star, held the position of the other guard with equal success. Billy was rated by sports writers and opposing coaches as the 'Cats' ace on playing a bang-up floor game. He possessed a natural easiness in intercepting and tossing passes, and was a big factor in the machinery of the team.

The forward positions left vacant by the graduation of ex-Captain Earl Beal, and the fighting Dan Jones, were filled by five great forwards, each a stellar player of ability. "Shuny" Brittain, football chief, handled one end of scoring twins in great style except in a few cases of personal vainness. He was a consistent high scorer and a constant source of worry to adverse score seekers. Little Bill May, in striking contrast to Brittain in size, substituted for the latter in fine style. On the other forward position, Tom Lawther, John Hoggard and Claude Winstead alternated. Lawther and Hoggard, the larger and more methodical, played crack ball, while Winstead, a flashing roving threat, contributed a large number of points for his size.

One of the highlights of the season's work was the performance of the second team. Hammer and McKeithan frequently broke into the scoring column. These boys, along with Smith and Andrews, make great material for next year's Wildcats.

Despite the defeats, the season may be termed successful, and prospects for 1931 are bright.

Girls' Basketball

The season of '29-'30 was very successful. The girls won five games and lost one. They played a well rounded schedule, encountering teams from Southport, Newbern, and Florence, S. C.

Katherine Lacy, forward and captain for the last two years, has made a fine leader. She has done some excellent playing and has shown wonderful ability to work with her team.

The high scorer for this year was Dorothy Farmer, forward. 1929-1930 marks her second year on the varsity.

Octavia Smith, with one year of varsity experience, played well her second year as center.

Mae Allen Keels, guard, played a creditable game all season. This was her second year on the squad.

A consistent player and a good sport was found in Francis Smith, who played left guard.

Rachel Carroll, dynamic guard, played a neat brand of ball the entire season.

The squad this year has been very fortunate in having Georgia Huntington as its efficient and capable manager.

Miss Elizabeth Bray, attractive and capable coach, worked hard to make a winning team. Miss Bray deserves much of the credit for the team's very successful season.

Track

Upholding New Hanover's athletic reputation after the failure of the other local aggregations to win honors, the Wildcat track team, one of the best running outfits ever developed in this school, enjoyed a most successful season. Aided immensely by the addition of Zack Williams and Edgar Morris to the coaching staff, the local harriers performed almost spectacularly at times, and brought honor to the Gold and Black standards.

Pre-season dope figured the speedsters as serious contenders for the state throne, and later results proved the outlook was not wrong. With Bill Rankin, veteran half-miler, performing in that position, Lynch sprinting the 440-yard run and the broad jump, Smith setting records in the dashes and hurdles, and Earl Robinson leaving all opposition in the quarter mile, a great number of points were collected from the track part of the squad, while Brittain's skill with the weights, Kuhlken's adeptness at high jumping, and Relman Robinson's pole vaulting, secured a good portion of the total scores.

As for the past two years, the Wildcats fought into second place at the State Meet, being defeated for the premier honors by Charlotte. At this meet Gene Smith lowered the State low hurdles records, and added to his laurels by annexing places in the broad jump and sprints. "Bill" Rankin, running in excellent style, lowered the State half-mile record, set by himself the previous year. And Earl Robinson, fleet-footed sprinter, crashed through with a quarter-mile victory and a State record for the distance. Kuhlken and Brittain were good for a few more points in their respective contests.

After the great showing in the State Meet and previous encounters, and rated as one of the State's best track organizations, the team journeyed to Greensboro to meet in competition with the cream of the Old North State runners, and further brought laurels to old N. H. H. S. Here, the quartet of Rankin, Lynch, Brittain and Earl Robinson lowered the Southern outdoor mile relay record. This performance marked them as the supreme racers for this distance in Dixie. Here also, Smith captured the hurdle events again, and almost won the century dash.

The well directed efforts of manager Jack Hammer were a great factor in the team's excellent showing at the various meets. Coach Zack Williams and assistant coach, Edgar Morris, deserve much of the credit for the team's success. Due to their ability and experience the Wildcat team completed a very successful season.
